Fire incident at manufacturing partner in Wuxi (China)

Status of 19 January 2023 (Update #1)

Dear valued customer,

On 6 January 2023, a fire incident took place at the production site of one of our manufacturing partners in Wuxi (China). Its plating lines that support our Infineon site in Wuxi were severely damaged by the fire. The circumstances are beyond our reasonable control. We are in close exchange with the affected manufacturing partner. Our supplier will however not be able to provide services to Infineon until further notice.

Our dedicated team immediately activated short- and mid-term mitigation plans. We quickly pursued options to shift the production of affected technologies at our manufacturing site in Wuxi to other sites within our global production network and are now implementing respective capacity shifts to minimize impact on our supply capability.

Delivery plans are currently being updated and affected customers have been informed individually through the established channels. We are working diligently on resolving the critical supply situation and expect to resume delivery by mid February 2023. We apologize for any inconvenience as a result of this incident.

In case of any questions, please feel free to contact us.
